BREAKING THE NEWS TO COX AND HARDING

The Presidential candidates and their "Vices" have been receiving political delegations bearing the important tidings of the Chicago and San Francisco conventions. And now that the candidates have been notified it seems probable that everybody has been told whose names will be on the ballots in the frosty and melancholy days of November. But it does not seem at all likely that either business or industry is apt to become excited over the Presidential campaign. In this respect there have been a good many comments to the effect that neither Harding nor Cox are regarded as firebrands. The more correct explanation lies in the fact that in recent years, and particularly during the war, that it has been determined by the American people that the business of government must be confined to the handling of the affairs of government. In other words the day has passed when anyone expects a new President or a new Congress to start out upon a program to uproot the established policies under which business and commerce have been built. The ghosts of government ownership, the Plumb plan, nationalization of industries and the like, have been successfully put to sleep in the United States, and in place of these restless possibilities there has been built a substantial foundation for our transportation system, and for our financial system, as represented by the Federal Reserve Banks. It therefore appears that the present outlook on life promises the customary dullness of mid-summer enlivened by vacation periods for the rich and poor; after which a revival in business and the security markets are looked for while the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder is in the shock the campaign craters and political managers will enliven the country with a brisk campaign. Amid one final resounding shout the news will sweep the land telling who is the victor. No matter what is the result it is not likely to add one business failure or to upset any industrial or financial enterprise in the country. There is no danger that the bottom will fall out of the old U. S. A.

TENNESSEE ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS SEEK RECONSIDERATION

NASHVILLE, TENN., August 23.—Anti-suffragists are prepared today to seek reconsideration of the vote by which the Tennessee House ratified the Federal suffrage amendment. Speaker Walker, who changed his vote from nay to yea so he would be in position to move reconsideration, will make a motion that the House rescind its action. His privilege to do so under House rules expires tonight.

Suffrage opponents, as they tighten their lines for the final skirmish, express confidence in the result. Suffrage opponents announce that 47 members of the House have signed a pledge to vote to reconsider the ratification resolution. Several other assemblymen, they predict, will line up with the anti-suffrage forces before the proposed roll-call, thus insuring a majority for reconsideration.

Four thousand persons last night attended an anti-suffrage mass meeting, at which Speaker Walker outlined plans for a battle over suffrage on the floor of the House today.

A letter from Governor Cox, read at the mass meeting, comments on the section of the Tennessee constitution which provides that the Legislature has no power to act on a proposed amendment to the Federal constitution unless its members were elected after submission of the measure to the States. The present Legislature was elected in November, 1918, and the suffrage amendment was not submitted until several months later. Governor Cox wrote: "Our platform has made a positive declaration on the nineteenth amendment and, as you at once will recognize, the policy of that document becomes my own as well. At the same time, I shall endeavor to speak the policy of the platform to maintain the properties which your letter sets forth."

"I have no hesitation in saying that Section 32 of Article 2 of the Tennessee constitution is a wise plan. It should be adopted in all States. Whether it is in conflict with the Federal constitution as recently interpreted is another matter. Most lawyers with whom I have talked believe that it is not. However, it is not within my province to make this declaration."

KENTUCKY WOMEN CAN VOTE IN NOVEMBER.

The ruling of Attorney General Charles I. Dawson, of Kentucky, that women with the proper residence qualifications in this State have a legal right to vote for President at the November election, has solved many perplexing questions in connection with the suffrage situation. According to Attorney Richard P. Ernst, of Kentucky, Republican nominee for U. S. Senator, the right of suffrage in Presidential elections has been conferred on Kentucky women by a law enacted by the last General Assembly of the State. Each State has the constitutional right to fix the qualifications of electors, and therefore, Mr. Ernst explained, Kentucky women can vote for President under the State law, regardless of the fate of the Federal Suffrage amendment. One of the peculiarities of the Kentucky law is that it contains no provision for women to vote for the office of U. S. Senator, and consequently they will cast no ballots in that contest unless the Federal suffrage amendment is ratified by the necessary 36 States prior to the election.

GIRLS! LEMONS BLEACH; WHITEN

Make Lemon Lotion to Double Beauty of Your Skin

Squeeze the juice of two lemons of Orchard White which can be had at any drug store, shake well and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach for few cents.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, then shortly note the beauty of your skin.

Famous stage beauties use lemon juice to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion. Lemons have always been used as a freckle, sunburn and tan remover. Make this up and try it. (adv-tf-t)

CHANGING PRECIOUS STONES

Although experimenters have learned that it is possible to change the color of certain precious and semiprecious stones by exposing them to the action of radium, the discovery is probably of little practical importance. A man of science put a number of sapphires of different kinds into a box that contained a small quantity of radium; a month later the white sapphires had become yellow; the blue sapphires green; the wine-colored sapphires violet. But not many persons would be willing to experiment with stones that are of much intrinsic or sentimental value.

"Baby ukeleles" are now to be had. Good heaven! Is it going to be necessary to advocate race suicide for ukeleles?

FRIENDS AMAZED BY HER RECOVERY

Had Been In Bad Health So Long

She Lost Fifty Pounds—Tanlac Restored Her

It is doubtful if there has ever been a statement in all the thousands that have been made about Tanlac that is more interesting or more clearly and forcibly defines the remarkable powers of the medicine than the following from Mrs. Laura Barick, of 463 Meidorth street, Peoria, Ill. "I had been down in bed so long before I began taking Tanlac," said Mrs. Barick, "that after I recovered people who knew the frightful condition I had been in were amazed. I had suffered for eleven long years and had taken medicines and tried specialists in various cities, but, in spite of it all I had gotten so bad off that there was no hope for my recovery. My stomach was so badly upset that it even sometimes caused me to have awful cramps that lasted for hours. Even liquid diets caused this same misery and I would have such a stuffed-up, heavy feeling that my breath would come in short, quick gasps and I would think each breath was going to be my last. Sometimes I had almost deadly sick spells, just like I was going to faint, which exhausted me so completely that I would be in bed for several days unable to walk a step. Almost every day I had a headache that was so severe I could hardly bear it and I often had dreadful attacks of dizziness. My kidneys were badly disordered. I had a terrible pain in my back that felt like a knife sticking in me. My nights were spent in misery, my whole system seemed to be poisoned and my complexion turned yellow as gold. I lost so much weight that it alarmed me. I don't believe any woman ever went through as much suffering and had as little hope as I did and then lived through it all to be a well and happy woman."

"I believe as firmly as I believe anything that Tanlac has saved my life and my friends all say my recovery is simply wonderful and that I am looking as healthy and strong as I ever did. Can eat anything I want and digest it without a particle of trouble. I don't know what a headache is and I am entirely free from dizziness and from those weak, fainting spells I used to have. My kidneys are in splendid condition, the pains have gone from my back and I sleep soundly every night. My strength and energy have all returned and my health has not only been completely restored, but I have regained all my weight, fifty pounds."

Tanlac is sold in Paris at the People's Pharmacy. (adv)

IMITATING GREAT MEN.

"If the teachers could only teach the biographies of the great men, what it would do for this country," remarked a school principal the other day. It seems a good idea, though the schools try to teach so many things now that they sometimes fail to do anything thoroughly.

The time has gone by when you could interest young people with dry facts and dates. You must give them stories of experience, adventure and achievement.

Probably nothing would do so much to give young folks high ideas as stories of what great men and women have done. Almost all these people started from small beginnings, and the majority had to struggle with poverty. Their lives were a romantic struggle against obstacles. Young people who learn about them would naturally wish to imitate them, by struggling against their own difficulties, and rendering service to their community and country.

EVERYONE KNOWS THIS FELLOW.

I'm the guy who bawls out the telephone operator every chance he gets.

Why shouldn't I? I'm renting the phone, and paying for it. And she's just the operator. Just why you object is beyond me. I can't help it, if things are tied up, or she's busy with other calls, or that she's just a girl.

Because you object is no reason why I shouldn't express my thoughts when I'm renting and paying for the phone to get service. And I want it. It's not my fault that I'm not getting it, it's hers. I want good service and I expect to get it.

Besides, how do I know if she isn't laying down on the job or gossiping and not trying to serve me? Operators do that often enough.

Anyway a bawling out will do her good. It will show her I want service and expect to get it or intend to raise a rumpus when I don't get it. So long as I pay for the phone and get poor service I'll bawl her out for it. Let her serve me as I want or quit.

That's how I feel about it.

Keep on the shady side of the street, if there is any.

The man who has patented a corkscrew is one of those fellows, we presume, who just simply must have his little joke.

Keep this Door Open Too—
Mr. Merchant!

Would you lock one of your doors for the price of a telephone?

When your telephone is busy (with either incoming or outgoing calls) an important business-getting door of your store is closed and locked. Maybe the customer who wants to telephone you an order will wait until that door is open again—but maybe he won't!

If your present equipment is often in use, you might make a profit on another telephone or "trunk"—or on even several more; a good many merchants do.

We can list them all under the same number, using any of your lines that is idle when you are called. It will pay you to make it easy for your customers to reach you on the telephone. Think it over.
